The First Novel Prize 2024

Guidelines

The Center for Fiction is pleased to announce that submissions are now being accepted for our eighteenth annual First Novel Prize. This annual award was created in 2006 to honor the best first novel of the year. The winner receives a $15,000 prize with each shortlisted author receiving $1,000. The shortlist for the award will be announced in September 2024 and the prize will be given at The Center for Fiction's Annual Benefit and Awards Dinner held in December this year.

SUBMISSION PROCESS

Any U. S. publisher may enter books that will be published between January 1, 2024 and December 31, 2024. We prefer that these be submitted as finished copies, if available. Bound galleys and bound, edited manuscripts are also acceptable. You may apply and pay the $100 entry fee per submission online at www.centerforfiction.org. Please mail books to:

All books must be postmarked no later than March 15, 2024. All entry forms must be submitted online no later than March 15, 2024. Note: we no longer require entry forms to be submitted via email and snail mail. The Center for Fiction must receive ten copies of each book, bound galley, or bound, edited manuscript. Small independent publishers may apply for a fee reduction; please contact our Director of Writing Programs, Randy Winston, at randy@centerforfiction.org for more information.

Publishers are urged not to hold submissions until the last possible date, but to send books, bound galleys, or bound, edited manuscripts AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE. Our reading process begins immediately upon receipt.

ELIGIBILITY

Only first-time novelists who are American citizens or permanent residents are eligible for this award. Authors who have previously published novels in other countries are NOT eligible, even if the book in question is their first to be published in the U.S.

Only full-length first novels written in English are eligible. Translated works, novellas, collections of short stories, whether related or unrelated, and YA novels are NOT eligible.

Novels in ALL genres are welcome.

Only books published for the first time in the United States between January 1, 2024 and December 31, 2024 are eligible.

Books previously published elsewhere are NOT eligible. This includes self-publishing the book previously.

Self-published books and eBook only editions are NOT eligible.

There is no limit on the number of books entered by each publisher, provided each submission complies with the rules as above.

In the event of a dispute as to eligibility, The Center for Fiction will decide whether a book is eligible, and its decision will be binding.

Any books entered for the Awards process by the publishers that are subsequently determined to be ineligible, will still be subject to the stated entry fee of $100 per title.

The panel also may request titles that have not been submitted by publishers. Publishers are then asked by the Center to submit these titles for consideration and the entry fee will be waived.

SELECTION PROCESS

Carefully selected members of the Center's network of booklovers, which includes writers, librarians, booksellers, staff, and members and friends of The Center for Fiction, will act as first-tier readers. The long list recommended by these readers is then forwarded to a committee of distinguished American writers. From those recommended novels, our panel of judges chooses the shortlist and the winner. (Our judges in 2023 were Hannah Lillith Assadi, Ayana Mathis, Deesha Philyaw, and Ayana Mathis).

ADDITIONAL CONDITIONS OF THE AWARDS

Publishers of the winning and shortlisted books must agree:

A. To indicate that the book is a finalist or winner of the First Novel Prize by including approved text on future editions.

B. To inform authors of entered books that if chosen for the shortlist they must be present at the Center for Fiction's Annual Benefit and Awards Dinner in New York City and The First Novel Fête, both held in December. Travel and accommodations for each shortlisted author are the responsibility of the publisher.

C. To inform authors that, if shortlisted, they must agree to participate in the Center's related publicity, including a finalist reading (The First Novel Fête), just prior to the Annual Benefit and Awards Dinner. The shortlisted authors agree that their readings may be used in audio and/or video formats on The Center for Fiction's website.

D. All shortlisted writers agree to be interviewed for the Center's website in audio, video, or print formats. The shortlisted writers also agree that the interview may be used in an anthology of first novel finalist interviews.

E. The recipient of the Award must agree to allow his/her acceptance speech to be published in print, audio or video formats by The Center for Fiction on its website or podcast, and to be published in the Center newsletter and in a future anthology of first novelists' interviews.
